Challenge the Damsel-in-Distress Trope

This groundbreaking anthology turns the tables on the passive damsel-in-distress stereotype. Instead, it empowers female characters with agency, wit, and determination. These are not helpless maidens waiting for a prince to rescue them; they are strong, independent women capable of forging their own paths.

Explore Unexpected Perspectives

Get ready to see beloved fairy tales from entirely new perspectives. In "The Frog Prince's Ex," we meet a princess who dares to break up with her arrogant amphibian suitor. "The Fisherman and the Mermaid," on the other hand, offers a poignant tale of love and sacrifice from the mermaid's point of view.

Unleash the Power of Story

Stories have the transformative power to shape our beliefs and perceptions. "Who Wants Her Shoe Back Without The Prince" uses the familiar scaffolding of classic fairy tales to challenge harmful gender stereotypes and promote female empowerment.

Uncover Hidden Truths

Beneath the playful surface of these reimagined tales lie profound insights into the complexities of gender, power dynamics, and the search for self-fulfillment. Each story invites readers to question the assumptions and biases that have shaped fairy tales for generations.

Contributors from Diverse Voices

This anthology features a vibrant mix of authors from various backgrounds and experiences. Each contributor brings a unique perspective to the project, ensuring a rich and multifaceted exploration of fairy tale themes.

Sample Stories

Indulge in these captivating excerpts from the book:

- "The Frog Prince's Ex" by Christina Henry:

"I was done. Done with the frog, done with the witch, done with the whole ridiculous fairy tale. I had my own life to live."

- "The Fisherman and the Mermaid" by Ursula Vernon:

"He was not a prince. He was a fisherman. And I was not a prize to be won. I was a creature of the deep, with a will of my own."

- "Cinderella's Shoe is Too Small" by Kelly Barnhill:

"I do not want a prince. I do not want a footman. I want a horse. A fast one. And a map."
