Born in Hartford, Connecticut, Hepburn was the daughter of Katharine Martha Houghton and Thomas Norval Hepburn. Her father was a successful surgeon, and her mother was a suffragette and social activist. Hepburn was raised in a wealthy and privileged environment, but she was also taught the importance of independence and self-reliance.

Hepburn began her acting career in the early 1930s, and she quickly became one of the most popular actresses in Hollywood. She starred in a wide variety of films, including comedies, dramas, and musicals. Hepburn was known for her strong screen presence and her ability to play a wide range of roles.

In addition to her successful film career, Hepburn also had a successful stage career. She starred in a number of Broadway plays, and she won a Tony Award for her performance in "The Lion in Winter" in 1966. Hepburn also appeared in several television productions, and she won two Emmy Awards for her work in "The Eleanor Roosevelt Story" in 1965 and "The Glass Menagerie" in 1973.

Hepburn was a complex and fascinating woman, and her life and career are a testament to her strength, independence, and talent. She was a true pioneer in the film industry, and she paved the way for other women to achieve success in Hollywood.
