The mothers in this book come from all walks of life. They are rich and poor, black and white, young and old. But they all share one common experience: they have lost a child to drug addiction.

The stories in this book are raw and honest. The mothers share their pain, their grief, and their anger. But they also share their love for their children and their hope for a better future.

This book is a must-read for anyone who has been affected by drug addiction. It is a powerful reminder of the devastating toll that drugs can take on families. But it is also a story of hope and resilience. The mothers in this book have found a way to cope with their loss and to find meaning in their lives.

Here are some of the stories included in this anthology:

- A mother tells the story of her son, who was a talented musician and athlete. He started using drugs in high school, and his life quickly spiraled out of control. He died of a drug overdose at the age of 25.
- A mother tells the story of her daughter, who was a bright and beautiful young woman. She started using drugs in college, and her addiction quickly took over her life. She died of a drug overdose at the age of 22.
- A mother tells the story of her son, who was a loving and compassionate young man. He started using drugs in his early teens, and his addiction quickly took hold. He died of a drug overdose at the age of 19.

These are just a few of the stories included in this powerful anthology. Each story is unique, but they all share a common theme: the devastating toll that drug addiction can take on families.
