Jason Rezaian, the former Washington Post Tehran bureau chief, spent 544 days in an Iranian prison on charges of espionage. In his new book, 'Prisoner: My 544 Days in an Iranian Prison - Solitary Confinement, a Sham Trial, High Stakes', Rezaian recounts his experience in detail, providing a gripping and harrowing account of life behind bars in one of the world's most notorious prisons.

Rezaian was arrested in July 2014 and held in solitary confinement for months. He was subjected to intense interrogation and psychological torture. In October 2015, he was convicted of espionage and sentenced to 10 years in prison. Rezaian was released in January 2016 as part of a prisoner swap between Iran and the United States.

In 'Prisoner', Rezaian describes the physical and psychological toll that his imprisonment took on him. He writes about the loneliness, the boredom, and the fear that he experienced every day. He also describes the resilience and strength that he found within himself and the support that he received from his family and friends.

'Prisoner' is a powerful and important book. It is a testament to the resilience of the human spirit and a reminder of the importance of freedom of the press.
