

Road Crew Coming Through—A Bedtime Adventure for Construction Enthusiasts

Calling all construction enthusiasts! Sherri Duskey Rinker and Tom Lichtenheld are back with another heartwarming and engaging bedtime story that will capture the imaginations of young readers. Road Crew Coming Through: Goodnight, Goodnight, Construction Site follows the hardworking construction crew from their previous adventure, Goodnight, Goodnight, Construction Site, as they embark on a nighttime road construction project.

With lyrical text and charming illustrations, Rinker and Lichtenheld bring the road crew and their machines to life. Readers will delight in the details of the construction process, from the rumble of the bulldozers to the flashing lights of the safety vests.

As the construction crew works through the night, a young child watches from their window, feeling both excitement and a sense of security. They know that the road crew is working hard to make their community a better place.

Road Crew Coming Through is a perfect bedtime story for children who love construction vehicles, engineering, and all things that go bump in the night. It's also a great way to teach kids about the importance of teamwork, perseverance, and community service.

Here's a sneak peek inside the book:

The road crew's coming through, Working all night long. They're fixing the roads, So we can drive along.

The bulldozers rumble, The dump trucks roar. The safety lights flash, As they work more and more.

A child watches from her window, As the crew works through the night. She feels safe and happy, Knowing that they're keeping things right.

The road crew's coming through, And they're ng a great job. They're making our community better, With every bump and every throb.

Goodnight, goodnight, construction crew, Thank you for all you do. We'll see you again soon, When there's more work to be done.

In addition to reading the story, there are a number of activities that you can do with young readers to help them learn more about construction and engineering. Here are a few ideas:

- Visit a construction site. If there's a construction site near you, take your child for a visit. They can see the construction crew in action and learn about the different machines and materials that they use.
- Build a road crew playset. Use blocks, toy cars, and other toys to create your own construction site. Your child can use their imagination to create their own stories and scenarios.
- Read other books about construction. There are a number of great books available for children about construction and engineering. Here are a few suggestions:
  - Goodnight, Goodnight, Construction Site by Sherri Duskey Rinker and Tom Lichtenheld
  - The Little Engineer by Suzy Lee
  - Construction Site on Christmas Night by Sherri Duskey Rinker and AG Ford
