

The Worst Journey in the World: Antarctica 1910-1913

The Worst Journey in the World is a harrowing account of the ill-fated Terra Nova Expedition to Antarctica. Led by Captain Robert Falcon Scott, the expedition set out in 1910 with the goal of reaching the South Pole. But the journey was plagued by mishaps and tragedy from the start.

The team's ship, the Terra Nova, was beset by ice and storms, and the men were forced to endure extreme cold, hunger, and exhaustion. In January 1912, Scott and his four companions finally reached the Pole, only to find that they had been beaten to it by Roald Amundsen's Norwegian expedition.
