Timeless Wisdom: Life Lessons from Literary Allegories

4 pages | 948 words

The little prince, Hope for the flower, and Jonathan Livingston Seagull are stories that contain an everlasting moral lessons in life. These are stories with a philosophical implication, the works of the authors Antoine de Saint-Exupery, T.S. Eliot, and Richard Bach are devoted to a discussion of the sort of questions normally addressed in way of life. I said so because all the stories give emphasis to the function and role of the society, and also the purpose of life.

Moreover, the three stories are considered in the category of literary allegory and fable. An Allegory, according to the handbook (Introduction to Literature, p. vii), is a prose form in which the characters, ideas and actions stands for something else or for a system of ideas with meaning implied. Further, it is a symbolic story that can be transparently interpreted, such as in the story of The little prince the rose as a particular woman in the prince life, in Hope for the flower the pile of squirming, pushing caterpillars opponents or competitors while in Jonathan Livingston seagull the flock as a family.

A fable, on the other hand, is a short allegorical tale conveying moral or principle of behavior, the characters are usually animals talking like human beings but keeping their animal traits. Other than animals it may include mythical creatures, plants, objects, or forces of nature in which are humanized and teach a lesson like in The little prince so many characters that each has different lessons to the reader; the fox, the snake, the baobabs, the stars, the Tuiseul, the desert and also the prince itself. In the Hope for the flower, the grey falcon caterpillar teaches the essence of becoming what you are meant to be. While in the Jonathan Livingston seagull a fable about following your dreams even if it means going against the flock.

Therefore, the story of The Little Prince, Hope for the Flower, and Jonathan Livingston Seagull has been described as an allegory and a fable that authors made to understand and realize the important in life and it represents some of the many roles of aspect in life such as honesty, loneliness, faith, success, love, compassion, fear, and regret.

What lesson did you learn from each story?

The Little Prince

This story convey many lessons. From the little prince journey we can learned not to be like the other grown-ups in the story, that we shouldn't be like a king who rules the things that are not to be ruled, a condescended man who is self-centered, a tippler who is busy doing nothing but to drink liquor; a businessman who is all about wanting to become rich and we shouldn't be a desert man who doesn't have time to look at the stars and sees whom lies ahead in his world.

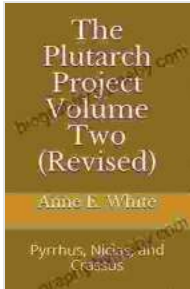

I've also learned from the fox that listening others is having a friend. And the message that catches my attention was his secret, the very simple secret "It is only with the heart that...
